Basic information

In the case of family benefit equalization, child benefit is usually paid during the year. At the end of the calendar year, the tax office checks as part of an income tax assessment whether a child allowance and an additional allowance for the child's care and education or training needs should be deducted or whether the child benefit should remain.

However, the allowances are always taken into account when calculating the solidarity surcharge and church tax.

The child allowance can be claimed for children who are related to the taxpayer in the first degree.

Under certain conditions, a child allowance can also be claimed for foster children.

Children over the age of 18 who have not yet reached the age of 25 can be taken into account under certain conditions. For disabled children, there is no age limit for eligibility under certain conditions.

After completing their first vocational training/studies, children of full age are only taken into account if they are not in gainful employment.

Requirements

- You must be related to the child within the first degree of kinship
- In the case of foster children, the relationship must be similar to that of a family and they must not have been taken in for gainful purposes. The prerequisite is that the custody and care relationship with the biological parents no longer exists.
- Children over the age of 18 who have not yet reached the age of 21 can only be considered if they:
- Are not in employment and are registered as jobseekers with an employment agency in Germany.

- Children over the age of 18 who have not yet reached the age of 25 can only be considered if they:

- After completing their first vocational training or first degree course, children over the age of 18 who have not yet reached the age of 25 are only taken into account if they are not in gainful employment. Gainful employment with up to 20 hours of regular weekly working hours, a training service relationship or a mini-job are not harmful.
