Basic information

The deregistration must take place

- when moving abroad or
- if a domestic dwelling (e.g. a secondary dwelling) is given up without moving into a new dwelling at the same time.

Deregistration is not required in the following cases:

- Moving within Germany
In this case, registration in the new municipality is sufficient. The new municipality notifies the former municipality of the move.
- Giving up the previous main residence.
As a result, the secondary residence becomes the sole residence.
- in case of several secondary residences, one of the secondary residences becomes the new main residence. In this case, the registration office of the new main residence must be notified in writing of the change of main residence within one week. The registration office will then notify the registration office of the previous main residence and, if necessary, also the registration office of the secondary residences.

Notes:

- An adult family member can deregister the entire family.
- In the case of unmarried partners or shared flats, a separate deregistration form must be completed and signed for each person. If the deregistration is done by only one household member or another third person, this person must be authorized in writing.
- Deregistration via the Internet is not possible.
- The deregistration of the secondary residence can be done at the registration office responsible for the secondary residence as well as at the registration office responsible for the sole residence or the main residence.

In the case of a move to the rest of the Federal Republic, it is no longer necessary to deregister, as this is done automatically by registering with the registration office at the location of the new residence.

Frequently asked Questions

- If the applicant submits a written request for a mandatory deregistration, does the applicant receive a confirmation?

If third parties (e.g. landlords) inform us that, to their knowledge, a person has moved out of an apartment and is required to register, this can only be taken as an indication. From a legal point of view, there is no explicit request for the official de-registration of another person. Rather, such a notification is the reason for ex officio investigations of the facts in this regard. A response to the person providing the information is generally only provided for if a written request for information from the population register has been made in advance and a fee has been charged.
